Search continues for missing women

ST. LOUIS — The U.S. Coast Guard resumed its search Saturday morning for two north St. Louis County sisters who apparently fell or were thrown from the Chain of Rocks Bridge early Friday.

A cousin of the women, Thomas Cummins, 19, of Maryland, was booked Friday night on suspicion of murder, St. Louis police said. Warrants against Cummins were to be sought Saturday.

Cummins initially told police that four assailants had forced him and the two women to jump into the Mississippi River from the bridge, St. Louis city police said.

However, police were skeptical of his story — especially since he showed no injuries. Police said Cummins later admitted that his story was false.

Cummins believed that Cummins had made sexual advances toward one of the sisters and she fell off the bridge trying to avoid him. Cummins then apparently forced the other girl off the bridge, police said.

Cummins had told police initially he was able to swim to the Missouri shore after he and his cousins were accosted by four men.

Law enforcement officials on both sides of the river, including the Madison County Sheriff's Department, were continuing to look for the two missing women, Julie Kerry, 20, and Robin Kerry, 19, at press time Saturday.

The bridge, owned by the city of Madison, was closed in 1968, two years after the Interstate 270 bridge was opened. Since that time, the bridge has been the site of a number of incidents.

Officials have tried to keep trespassers off the bridge by erecting barriers to entrance on both

Steelworker retires on $1 million a year

By Bob Slate
Staff writer

CAHOKIA — It didn't happen exactly like the popular television commercial promoting the Missouri Lottery, but Robert Nordike of Cahokia retired from his job Friday after learning he had won more than $20.5 million in the Illinois State Lottery drawing March 20.

Nordike, 58, of 32 School Street in Cahokia, called his employer — American Steel Foundries in Granite City — to say he would be taking a vacation first, and then retiring.

Nordike said he began working at American Steel as a mold-cleaner in 1964, was laid off when production there halted in 1982, and was rehired in 1989.

He and his wife, Vivian, 68, have formed the Nordike Family Partnership and plan on sharing their fortune — $1.025 million annually for the next 20 years — with their family.

Bob and Vivian each has two brothers and a sister. They have six grandchildren, and are awaiting the birth of another grandchild any day, they said.

"We are going to share the money with our family," Vivian said. "They all need it; they need it the same as we do. We're going to help them all get out of debt."

One of his brothers recently underwent open-heart surgery, Bob said.

The Nordikes were in Granite City on Thursday to discuss their financial plans with their attorney, Mark Goldenberg, and to buy jewelry.

After paying off "about seven big bills," including their home and both of their vehicles, Bob said, "We'd like to buy some acreage in the country."

Vivian said she did not want anything lavish, but "I'd like to have a nice new home with a big kitchen, where I won't keep running over Bob."

Bob Nordike, a baseball fan, will continue to work at his part-time job as a security guard at Busch Stadium "because I enjoy it. They treat me right."

"And it keeps him out of my hair," Vivian added in jest.

Bob bought the winning ticket at Suburban Liquors, 3407 Mississippi Ave., Cahokia. He said he has played the lottery since its inception in

203 viaduct endorsed

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

MADISON — A new four-lane viaduct on Illinois 203 in Madison is one step closer to reality after action by the East-West Gateway Coordinating Council board of directors.

"I am happy to hear that the board has made the endorsement," Madison Mayor John Belicoff said Wednesday.

"We are looking forward to a much-needed replacement for the 203 overpass."

The East-West board endorsed the design stage of the Illinois Transportation Department project at a March 27 meeting in downtown St. Louis.

The new McCambridge Avenue structure will replace the present overpass, which has deteriorated and now is limited to two lanes of vehicular traffic. The viaduct crosses railroad yards.

The estimated $4.5 million project will involve the building of a new four-lane bridge with 11- and 12-foot-wide lanes from Harrison Street and Belt Avenue to Fifth Street in Madison.

The new one-span overpass will be located on an alignment 65 feet west of the existing McCambridge viaduct and will cross over Chicago & Northwestern, Norfolk & Western and Southern Pacific railroad tracks.

"It will be a welcome improvement for GRANITE CITY — Another new business is showing interest in moving to the downtown area.

The city council voted Wednesday night to request development proposals for the block bounded by Madison and Grand Avenues, 30th and 21st Streets.

According to downtown development committee chairman Jim Miller, the city has received interest from a developer — with a "major pharmaceutical retailer" involved in the deal — to build on the block. However, the developer needs to acquire more of the

Taking charge Seminar for women only

GRANITE CITY — "Women Helping Women — Take Charge of Your Life" will be the topic of a day-long seminar Saturday, April 13, sponsored by the Granite City Business and Professional Women.

The seminar, which will be held at the Granite City Campus of Belleville Area College, will begin at 9:30 a.m. and last until 4 p.m. A donation of $2 will be requested at the door.

According to Theresa Dickinson, BPW publicity chairman, booths will be set up to offer everything "from fun to business." Local merchants will have booths and will demonstrate or sell products and services, ranging from crafts to cosmetics to preparing resumes. She said other booths will include health screenings and health products, representatives of temporary-help firms, representatives of "work out of your home" businesses and booths set up "just for fun things."

In addition to the booths, guest speakers will make presentations on topics of interest to women.

"We will have something for every woman," Dickinson said. "Women looking for work, women who work, housewives, no matter what role a woman chooses to play, we have something that will be helpful."

"But most of all, it's a lot of fun."

The guest speakers will include: Janet Mills: "Financial Planning — Ideas for Women." Ellen Frederick: "Eating the Right Foods for the Right Results."

Edwardsville, county will tackle parking together

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

EDWARDSVILLE — With only a year remaining before the new Madison County Administration Building opens, the county and the City of Edwardsville will be joining forces to alleviate long-standing parking woes.

"We're very anxious to sit down with them," said County Board member William "Skip" Krumeich, D-Edwardsville. Krumeich serves on both the city's Parking Committee and the county's Building Committee, which has also conducted its own parking study.

A study conducted by Desman and Associates for the City of Edwardsville was discussed during a meeting Thursday night of the Parking Committee.

Howard May, a senior vice president with Desman, said there are 1,937 parking spaces within the downtown Edwardsville business district — 1,676 off-street and 261 on-street.

But only about 1,300 of the total are within walking distance, May said. It is also about 100 spaces short of the 1,433 needed to accommodate the administration building and nearby Mark Twain Plaza when both are filled to capacity, May added.

May said the city and county could create a "mega-lot" with more than 400 spaces. A lot already jointly owned by the county and the city on North Second Street could be made to accommodate 180 additional cars by reconfiguring and restriping each space to 8.5 feet wide.

"That would be more than ample for today's smaller cars," May said.

Paving and lighting the lot would also be needed improvements. But planning on surface parking to accommodate growth is unwise, May said.

"If you start losing on-street parking, then you're on the short side," May said. "It's not a good long-term solution."

A good, but expensive long-term solution is a parking garage. The Second Street lot would also be one of three ideal places to build a parking garage, another option to be considered, May said. Two other locations — the superlot off Main Street used by a number of downtown businesses and another area on the south side of St. Louis Street — were also discussed.

To have a one- to three-level parking garage, an area 120 feet by 300 feet, just smaller than an average football field, would be needed, May said. A 400-car garage would cost about $2.5 million to build, not including operational costs, May said.

Those costs could be paid for through general obligation bonds, or ideally through a parking fund established through user fees, on-street parking meters and parking fines.

The city would have to re-install its parking meters, which it removed in 1981, in order to get people to park in the garage, Mayor Dennis DeToye said.

May said that on-street parking should be limited to short-term visitors and be strictly enforced by one or two full-time officers. Signs should also be widely used so that visitors can find additional parking easily, May added.

"Promotion of space is the key to parking," May said.

Ray Eberhart, owner of Buhrmester Wallpaper and Paint on North Second Street, said he was very concerned that provisions be made for the 640 parking spaces the county estimates it will need to accommodate its new building.

May said the county anticipates needing spaces for 450 employees, 180 visitors and jurors and 10 county vehicles.

Eberhart said courthouse traffic already frequently spills into his business' parking lot. He suggested remote parking, located one to three miles from the courthouse, accompanied by a shuttle service into the downtown area.

It was an option the county has already considered and rejected, Krumeich said.

"You won't get people to park out there because they come in at different times," Krumeich said. "It would also be too expensive to keep a shuttle running like that."

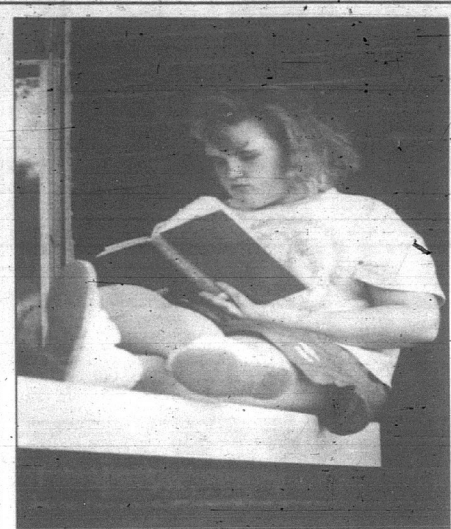

The Parking Committee will meet again before meeting with county officials, DeToye said.

Madison County is studying plans to build either several surface lots that will hold a total of 685 cars or a parking garage and a surface lot that would hold 653 cars.

Proposals drafted by Leo A. Daly Co. of St. Louis put the parking garage and lot at $4.1 million and the surface lots at $2 million.

Jim Monday, county administrator, said the county may be able to build surface lots for $900,000 with work beginning this year if approved.

"We will be able to provide some initial money for a garage but it's obvious from the high cost that governing bodies will have to pool money to do it," Monday said.

Miles, Motil win in park district

Thursday's edition of the Press-Record mistakenly reported that George Sykes, Robert Austin and Kevin Sykes were involved in the Granite City Park District board election. They were candidates in April 1987 and part of a computerized chart that contained old rather than revised voting information.

Nancy Sanders-Miles and Ronald S. Motil were elected to six-year terms April 2. They were the only candidates for the two positions. Sanders-Miles, a teacher and current president of the park board, was re-elected as a commissioner with an unofficial vote total of 4,654.

Motil, of 38 Terrace Lane, succeeds Dora Darnell, who retired after a six-year term. The new commissioner received 3,754 votes. He is an attorney with offices in Granite City.

Delay likely on new U.S. judge

By Joe Carroll
Correspondent

SPRINGFIELD — The nomination of a new federal judge for the Southern District of Illinois will be delayed until at least mid-May, an aide to U.S. Rep. Robert Michel said.

Michel, the ranking Republican member of the Illinois Congressional delegation, and House minority leader, is responsible for nominating someone to fill the slot.

He said he will submit a nomination after considering recommendations from a special committee of the Illinois State Bar Association. The final decision is up to President George Bush and the U.S. Senate.

Four Belleville attorneys are among 13 candidates vying for the job, which pays $125,100 a year.

U.S. Attorney Frederick Hess and Belleville lawyers Harry Sterling, James Cook and Robert Wells are all in the running.

Michel had hoped to make a nomination by the end of April, according to spokeswoman Kerri Sattler.

But interviews with candidates for a new judgeship in the Central District took longer than expected, forcing the ISBA to delay interviews in the Southern District, said Steve Anderson, a spokesman for the association's 32-member committee on judicial appointments.

Anderson said interviews with Southern District candidates were expected to begin Saturday and would be complete by the first or second weekend in May.

Once those interviews are finished, the committee will recommend three or four candidates to the Peoria congressman.

The selection process could be delayed further if Michel conducts interviews of his own with the committee's top picks, as he has indicated he would like to do.

The new judge will sit with three existing judges in East St. Louis and Benton.

Banquet to aid children's center

U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello will be guest speaker at the first annual benefit banquet to help abused children.

It will be held at 7 p.m. Monday, April 15, at Di Romero's Restaurant on Illinois 3, East Alton, formerly the Lewis and Clark Restaurant.

The purpose of the benefit dinner is to raise funds for the Children's Hope Center, a center to be constructed for the purposes of aiding, counseling and supporting abused children. Patron tickets are $50 per person and corporate tables for 10 people are available for $500.

Tickets and information are available by calling 239-9559 or 462-4265.

Children's Hope Center is non-profit, and has certified tax-exempt status. The dinner is being sponsored by the Community Hope Center in Cottage Hills.

Members of the steering committee for the Children's Hope Center include Madison County Treasurer John Shimkus, Dan Allen, Lenora Bethel, Rita Hecker, Crystal Davis, Kenneth Dexam, Jan Moore and C. Fred Francis.

County should add beds, staff at jail, state department says

The rising number of inmates in the Madison County Jail is straining the jail's resources, according to a state agency.

A report by the Illinois Department of Corrections said county officials should consider hiring more staff and adding more beds for inmates.

Between July and December 1990, the jail averaged 141 inmates each day, the report said. Between July 1989 and June 1990, the daily inmate population was 124.

Ronnie Wells, an inspector for the Department of Corrections, said the population increase has put "under pressure" on jail staff to properly supervise routine activities.

"Detainees are now routinely held without sufficient beds, especially on weekends," Wells also criticized the jail for placing people charged with misdemeanors in the same cell blocks as those charged with felonies.

Lt. Eddie Newsome, jail superintendent, said the findings weren't surprising because he and Sheriff Bob Churchich have been clamoring for 50 more beds.

"People have to sleep on a mattress on the floor because we don't have enough bunk space," Newsome said. "Sometimes they can't go outside for recreation because we don't have enough staff."

The 10-year-old jail has a capacity of 150 inmates, but Newsome said the jail frequently houses more than that on week ends.

The mixing of inmates charged with felonies with those charged with misdemeanors and traffic offenses can lead to lawsuits, Newsome said.

"If I was a traffic offender waiting to be banded out and had to be in the same cell with someone charged with murder, I'd be scared to death he may beat me up," Newsome said.

Five inmates who had been on a hunger strike and had filed lawsuits against the county had many complaints about jail conditions, but Wells said he couldn't substantiate them. "Correctional staff do not have time to supervise routine cleaning procedures and help detainees solve daily problems," Wells said.

PRESIDENTIAL RECOGNITION: Josephine Bailey holds the certificate that President George Bush sent to honor her late husband, Lloyd Bailey, for service in the armed forces. Bailey served in the U.S. Army Air Corps for four years during World War II in Italy, where he and Josephine met and were married. Bailey was 9th Precinct Democratic committeeman for 27 years and served 12 years as a 5th Ward alderman in Granite City.

Pictures still sought for salute to armed services

Mayor Von Dee Cruse, Granite City Ambassadors and the Youth Achievement Day Committee are urging greater participation in a City Hall pictorial salute to all members of the armed forces from Granite City.

Photographs of men and women serving in military, air, Marine and naval units will be displayed in the lobby of the City Hall, Niedringhaus and Edison avenues.

The theme will be "Granite City salutes you," and it is hoped to honor all the sons, daughters, husbands, wives, brothers, sisters, fathers and mothers who are in uniform.

Please send a wallet-sized color photo of your honoree in uniform to the Mayor's Office, City Hall, 2000 Edison Ave., Granite City 62040 or bring it in personally," the mayor said.

"Please have the name, rank, military organization and Granite City telephone number printed on the back of the picture."

"This project is important to our families and our community, so please get the photographs to us as soon as possible."

Steel plant tour

A Granite City Steel plant tour and program will be the topic at a meeting of the RCGA Gateway Area and Southwestern Illinois Area Small Business Councils at 4:45 p.m. Wednesday, April 17.

The councils will meet at National Steel Corporation's general office building, 20th and State streets, Granite City.

There will be a tour of the Hot Strip and Caster facilities.

Impact report favorable, joint-use seen in 5 years

By Liz Quirin
Staff writer

The first airplane could touch down at a joint military and civilian airport at Scott Air Force Base near Belleville as early as October 1996. That was the projection made Friday by David Cornell, civil engineer and project manager for the Scott joint-use airport for the Scott joint-use airport. TAMS is an international consulting engineering firm hired to develop a five-year plan for the proposed airport.

Cornell spoke about the airport after the military released a preliminary report on the impact the proposed airport would have on the surrounding environment. The Military Airlift Command filed the draft environmental impact statement for joint-use at Scott AFB with the Environmental Protection Agency and sent copies of the statement to local libraries in the Kaskaskia Library System and to agencies, groups and individuals who have previously requested the document, said John Baricovic, St. Clair County Board chairman.

"The county is very excited about the environmental impact statement," Baricovic said. "It was more than we expected."

The impact statement was put together by Argonne Laboratories, based near Chicago, at the direction of the Air Force at a cost of about $1.5 million, Baricovic said.

Two public hearings will be conducted on the impact statement at Belleville Area College on May 8, with one beginning at 9 a.m. and the other at 7 p.m. Baricovic praised the Air Force for being completely cooperative, even though the airport command was moving men and materials to and from a war zone during the Persian Gulf War.

"Whenever we needed them — MAC — we got them," Baricovic said. "In the middle of the environmental impact study, they fought a war."

The impact statement showed all environmental problems could be mitigated or relieved except one, Baricovic said.

"The only one we can't mitigate is the loss of the farm land, but of the entire amount (3,300 acres), we'll be able to lease back 1,700 acres to farmers (until the land is needed for expansion)," Baricovic said.

Another area of concern is the wetlands that would be affected by the airport expansion, said Robert Williams, a Corps of Engineers wetland determination engineer. "It will determine the ratio of mitigation (for the wetlands)," said Robert Williams.

Coverdale, St. Clair County director of transportation.

"We will develop new wetlands within the boundaries of the land within the area," Coverdale said.

Baricovic also noted that, in the impact statement, no archaeological or historical site will be disturbed by the airport and no animal will become extinct because of the airport.

"There are absolutely no problems in the environmental impact statement," Baricovic said.

The impact study recommended that a 7,000-foot runway for civilian air traffic be constructed and a 1,000-foot expansion be made to the military runway.

These suggestions were made in a study completed by the consulting engineering firm in 1987, Baricovic said.

"When the master plan was completed in 1987, we thought it was a good risk to go ahead and spend some dollars based on that document," Baricovic said.

Baricovic said the county is now working closely with the Air Force on solving the problems associated with moving Cardinal Creek Village, a military housing complex, which the Air Force said must be moved if joint-use moves forward.

Special program for young women

GRANITE CITY — Young women, ages 12 to 20, are invited to a special "Choices" program in conjunction with the Women Helping Women seminar Saturday, April 13.

"Bring along your daughter or young friend," said Theresa Dickinson of the Granite City Business and Professional Women, sponsors of a program we plan to have in all the schools next year and it will get its "kickoff" right here.

Both "Women Helping Women" and "Choices" will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at the Granite City Campus of Belleville Area College.

Dickinson said that "Choices," developed by Girls Inc. of California, is a program designed to make young girls aware of the "many, many choices they have in life."

The April 13 program will include a series of presentations by Linda Wagner, maternal and child health coordinator of Girls Inc.'s Mother-Daughter Choices, entitled "Why Do I Gotta Know This Stuff (Envisioning Your Future)" that will address decision making, budgeting, education and careers.

"It's a motivational seminar," Dickinson said. "We want girls to be aware of the need to protect themselves. Even if they only want to get married and have children, they need to have something, some kind of skill, they can fall back on."

In addition to Wagner, representatives of various career fields will make presentations on why the Traditional and Non-traditional Roles of Women. These will include discussions on why the representatives chose their particular career, each career's advantages and disadvantages, and things to consider before choosing a career.

"The representatives will include people from very, very traditional career fields like secretarial and nursing and also from very nontraditional fields, including a pipefitter, a supervisor of an oil-field division at a steel mill, and a crane operator," Dickinson said.

If a girl does want to go to college, that's fine. Maybe a two-year trade school would be better. But they need to know they have choices.

The goals of the "Choices" program are to encourage higher education and career aspirations in teenagers and young women by making them aware of the current facts concerning women's roles in the workplace and home.

To encourage girls to plan for economic self-sufficiency by increasing their knowledge about the income required to support a family, by teaching about various careers and by improving their attitudes toward high-paying non-traditional jobs.

To encourage girls to delay motherhood by increasing their knowledge about the economic, social, emotional and physical cost of bearing a child.

To discourage self-destructive behaviors such as drug and alcohol use, early or unplanned pregnancy, and dropping out of school — by increasing the girls' self-esteem and helping them visualize rewarding and self-reliant futures.

Viaduct

The residents of Madison and also all residents of the Quad City and St. Louis areas who use the overpass each day," Bellico said.

The project will also involve relocating tracks, building two new access roads, installing new traffic signals and performing street improvements.

The state is seeking $2.9 million in federal grant funding for the project and has committed $960,000 in state money. The city of Madison is contributing $100,000 in local funds.

With the project expected to cost $4.5 million, construction bids are expected to be received by the city at a recent meeting of the Madison City Council.

The project received a ringing endorsement from Madison County Board Chairman Nelson

Hagauer, chairman of the Gateway Council's board.

"In essence, I just want to give you a little suggestion. I would ask that you consider this real strongly," Hagauer told others at the board meeting. "If you can't live with this, you need that viaduct!"

The board includes the chief elected officials from the city of St. Louis and seven adjacent Illinois and Missouri counties.

"I'm not really wanting to live with this," Miller said. "I would like these things one at a time."

In other action related to downtown, the council received a letter from attorney Morris B. Chapman, a building located at 18th Street and Grand Avenue, be approved.

property on the block before any deal can be cut.

Miller said the city has options of about 50 percent of the property needed.

The site is directly across Madison Avenue from a new medical office building currently under construction, and adjacent to McDonald's restaurant.

"There is the possibility of a good-size retail store," according to Miller, "and maybe another building at the facility."

Miller said the proposal may be the sign of things to come, as a limited interest has also been sold on the block directly behind the site (bounded by Grand Avenue and State Street and 20th and 21st Streets).

"But no one really wants to live with this," Miller said. "I would like these things one at a time."

Suburban Liquors, owned by William Skidis, will receive a $200 bonus for selling the winning ticket. Skidis, who has now sold five Grand Prize Lotto tickets, owns several Cahokia lottery outlets.

He said 80 percent of his Lotto business comes from Missouri residents, including a St. Louis woman who won $3,761,960 in July 1984.

Bob and Vivian, commander of Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 1699 in Cahokia, has worked with organizations assisting the needy.

Goldenberg said Bob Nordike once went on a crusade to help hungry persons find food, when he had only six dollars in his own pocket.

But Nordike should not find himself in this position any more, although he said he intends to continue to help the less fortunate.

receive their first check in about three or four weeks.

The couple accepted an oversized check for $20.5 million from Illinois Lottery Director Deshaun Rogers on Wednesday, but it was only symbolic of the prize.

"I've had two jobs (simultaneously) for the last 12 years," said Bob Nordike said, tears welling up in his eyes. "And now I'm going to work when I want to work."

Vivian, a hairdresser, said she would close down her business once her employees had found other work. During Wednesday's press conference, she continually shook her head and said, "It's not real, it's still not real."

The $20.5 million March 29 Lotto jackpot was the second largest in Illinois State Lottery history, lottery officials said.

The jackpot was split by three winning ticket holders: the Nordikes, Raul and Morayna Garcia of Milwaukee, and Bruce Stendahl and Ronald Zold of Racine, Wis.

In addition to matching all six numbers — 7, 9, 29, 32 and 33 — on one line of his winning ticket, Bob also matched four of the numbers on a second line, adding $72 to his initial Grand Prize check of $1,025,348.33.

The 19 subsequent yearly payments will each total $1,025,348.33.

Vivian said they expect to do some traveling.

"I'd like to go to Las Vegas for a couple of days," Bob said. He said he helped build the 389th Engineer Amphibious Support Regiment camp at Desert Rock in Nevada in 1961. He will attend a 40-year reunion of his regiment in June in Minnesota.

"I don't know why they called

"I'm kind of tender-hearted, so I almost broke down. And when I showed (Vivian), she started crying, too."

In addition to boats provided by the St. Louis Fire Department and Madison County Search and Rescue Team, a 17-foot outboard motor boat from the Coast Guard was used in searching for the women late Friday.

sides of the river.

The St. Louis-based Coast Guard vessel first began patrolling the Mississippi River shortly after 5 a.m. Friday to look for the women.

"We're looking for two women that are somewhere south of the Chain of Rocks Bridge," said Chief Petty Officer Richard Griggs, public affairs officer for the Second U.S. Coast Guard District.

"Our crew started at the McKinley Bridge (in the Venice area) and worked their way north, toward the Chain of Rocks."

By late Friday the search team was conducting a visual search of the water for the two women, Griggs said. At least one diver from the St. Louis area had been brought in to assist in the search, he said.

Police recovered a "streamer" flashlight from the site of the crime, Nelson said. Inscribed on the flashlight in two places was "Horn's 1," she said.

The search on the Illinois side of the river is being coordinated by the Madison County Sheriff's Department.

In addition to boats provided by the St. Louis Fire Department and Madison County Search and Rescue Team, a 17-foot outboard motor boat from the Coast Guard was used in searching for the women late Friday.

Man who lied to FBI is convicted

By David Migoya
Staff writer

A Centralia man who tried to implicate his ex-girlfriend by telling federal authorities she knew when a bomb would be placed at Scott Air Force Base was convicted April 3 by a federal jury in East St. Louis.

Roy G. Roper, 28, faces up to five years in federal prison for his conviction on making false statements to federal authorities.

Roper called the FBI on Jan. 18 — just several days after the Persian Gulf war started — and said a bomb would be placed at Scott Air Force Base.

Roper initially told agents he learned the bomb plot from his ex-girlfriend, but later admitted the hoax was meant as retaliation for their breakup.

The eight-man, four-woman jury returned its guilty verdict after about an hour of deliberations.

Federal Judge William L. Beatty of Granite City said he would sentence Roper on June 11. Roper probably will not be given the maximum sentence.

Prison term for woman in robbery

A 32-year-old Granite City woman was sentenced to two years in prison for a robbery on Monday, one each on counts of aggravated battery and robbery.

Associate Judge J. Lawrence Keshner handed down the sentence to Neva Ragan of the 2900 block of Madison Avenue. Keshner ruled that the sentences are to run concurrently.

On March 10, a 69-year-old Granite City man suffered head injuries after being struck by Ragan in his home. The man allegedly had agreed to pay Ragan for sexual favors.

The victim told police that

While the victim was attempting to escape the man at the front door, Ragan struck the victim from behind, he told police.

The pair reportedly left the victim's home, taking with them a video cassette recorder and a tape recorder belonging to the victim.

In an unrelated case Monday, Keshner sentenced a Venice man for wounding a 17-year-old girl with a BB gun.

Derrick Williams, 19, of the 100 block of Lee Wright Homes was sentenced to two years of probation and ordered to stay away from the victim.

On March 10, the girl was breaking up a fight between Madison Middle School students in front of the Bissett-Schley Apartments when Williams approached her with a BB gun.

Williams shot her in the face, wounding her just below eye level.

According to police reports, Williams got the gun from a 16-year-old boy who was at the scene of the fight.

Martin says Fears is target of county grand jury probe

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

EDWARDSVILLE — A Collinsville man acquitted in 1989 in the murder of a woman, Gary Fears, after being struck by a bartender took the Fifth Amendment before a Madison County grand jury Thursday rather than give testimony regarding the death of Belleville real estate developer Frank O'Donnell.

Dennis DeLuca, 42, declined on the advice of his attorney, James Martin of St. Louis, who said DeLuca did not even know O'Donnell.

Martin, in an interview Friday, said it was clear that Collinsville businessman Gary Fears was the target of the investigation. Fears is one of O'Donnell's former business partners.

Martin said DeLuca was being asked by investigators "to say things he couldn't say" regarding Fears. Martin said DeLuca knows Fears but didn't know O'Donnell.

"DeLuca doesn't have a clue as to who O'Donnell was," Martin said. "What he could testify to is zero. He doesn't have a clue as to who he's got."

Fears, also contacted Friday, declined comment, saying that Martin's statements had addressed the issue.

But Fears did add that if the Illinois State Police has a basis for filing charges, then it should be filing such charges.

Thursday marked the seventh week of a grand jury investigation into O'Donnell's death.

O'Donnell, 61, was found Nov. 17 lying on a bed in a room at the Quality Inn Collinsville. Death was originally attributed to a heart attack and no autopsy was performed.

In late January, a St. Louis judge ordered O'Donnell's body exhumed for an autopsy. Tests showed a lethal dose of barbiturates in O'Donnell's body and an investigation by the Madison County coroner's office, the St. Louis County Division of Criminal Investigation and Collinsville police was launched. It continues.

"Nobody can fault the cops for that," Martin said. However, Martin noted that investigators sought testimony from DeLuca and Danny Cox, another of O'Donnell's clients, regarding Fears.

"It's beyond appearances," Martin said. "The reality of it is that they're after Fears."

Cox, one of the incorporators of Panama Jack, testified before the grand jury last month.

"He (Cox) didn't have anything to tell them," Martin said. "We had talked to them (investigators) before and he told the grand jury the same thing."

"Their eyes are bigger than their stomachs," he said of the investigators, "and what Danny told them they just couldn't digest."

Martin said he didn't think that members of the Madison County state's attorney's office were aware of coercive tactics used.

"No one in the state's attorney's office is doing this," Martin said.

"I don't think they know some of the things that are going on. If they did, they'd tell them to stop."

State official says more day cares are needed in county

More licensed day care homes are needed in Madison County, according to Tom Kircher, regional day care coordinator with the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services. Licensed day care homes may care for up to eight children and must meet state licensing standards. The standards include requirements in the areas of nutrition, health and hygiene, safety and discipline. Licensed day care homes can be reimbursed for the cost of food for day care children under their care through the child care food program. Under this state-sponsored program, licensed day care homes are paid $1.27 per day per child for lunch, 76 cents per day per child for breakfast and 41 cents per day per child for snacks.

Licensed day care homes are independent and may set their own prices for services. The Department of Children and Family Services pays licensed day care homes up to $13.59 per day per child for day care services to children under 2½, and up to $10.45 per day for children over 2½, Kircher said. The Department pays licensed day care homes and center to provide day care through a variety of programs. As of December 1990, 145 homes and 32 day care centers serving a maximum of 4,288 children were licensed in Madison County. This compares to a population of 20,718 children ages 0 to 5, Kircher said. While there is no charge for a day care license, all members of a caregiver's family must have a physical examination. Persons interested in becoming licensed for day care may call the regional licensing office at 583-2170.

'Silence of Lambs' theater employees get scare

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

The Silence of the Lambs' theater employees as well as patrons, as evidenced by a recent incident at the Chesterfield Cine.

That theater, like many that are showing the film, has a large lobby display featuring an almost life-sized cardboard cut-out of Anthony Hopkins in the role of the flesh-eating serial killer, Dr. Hannibal Lector.

Lector is depicted behind bars in a straight-jacket, dressed in an orange prison uniform with a white undershirt.

Several nights ago, according to an eyewitness, St. Louis County Police officers showed up at the theater to give employees a description of an inmate who had just escaped from one of the county's jails.

The prisoner was apprehended later that evening and returned to the prison.

But not before a theater usher was overheard to say: "When I heard the description of the inmate from the policeman, I asked (the manager) if I could go home early."

Joplin close to lead role

Veteran local actor Joneal Joplin looks like he has landed a lead role playing the father of headline Debbie Boone's character, Esther Smith, in The Mummy production of "Meet Me in St. Louis." The show, which will play the Fox Theater April 30 to May 5 before leaving on a 15-week tour, will preview April 26 and 27 in Knoxville, Tenn.

Culver returns to cheers

Birthday Cake/Birthday cake and balloons were the order of the day Tuesday at the Mummy's executive offices in Forest Park as staffers and Mummy President Bill Culver celebrated his 71st birthday. The party coincided with Culver's return to work after a 10-day stay at Barnes Hospital.

Culver entered the hospital after a fall from a ladder while working on the set of the production. Culver is recovering well and is expected to return to work in a few days.

after being bothered for some time by a back problem and related difficulties. "This is the best I felt in a long time," Culver said before outlining plans to work half-days for a few weeks before resuming a full-day work schedule.

During the festivities, Culver thanked the staff members and general manager Denny Reagan for their support and their thoughtfulness and extra effort while he was out.

Said one Mummy employee, "Bill looks like he just got back from Grand Cayman (Island), not Barnes."
